

DEVELOPMENT PERMITS IN THE RMWB

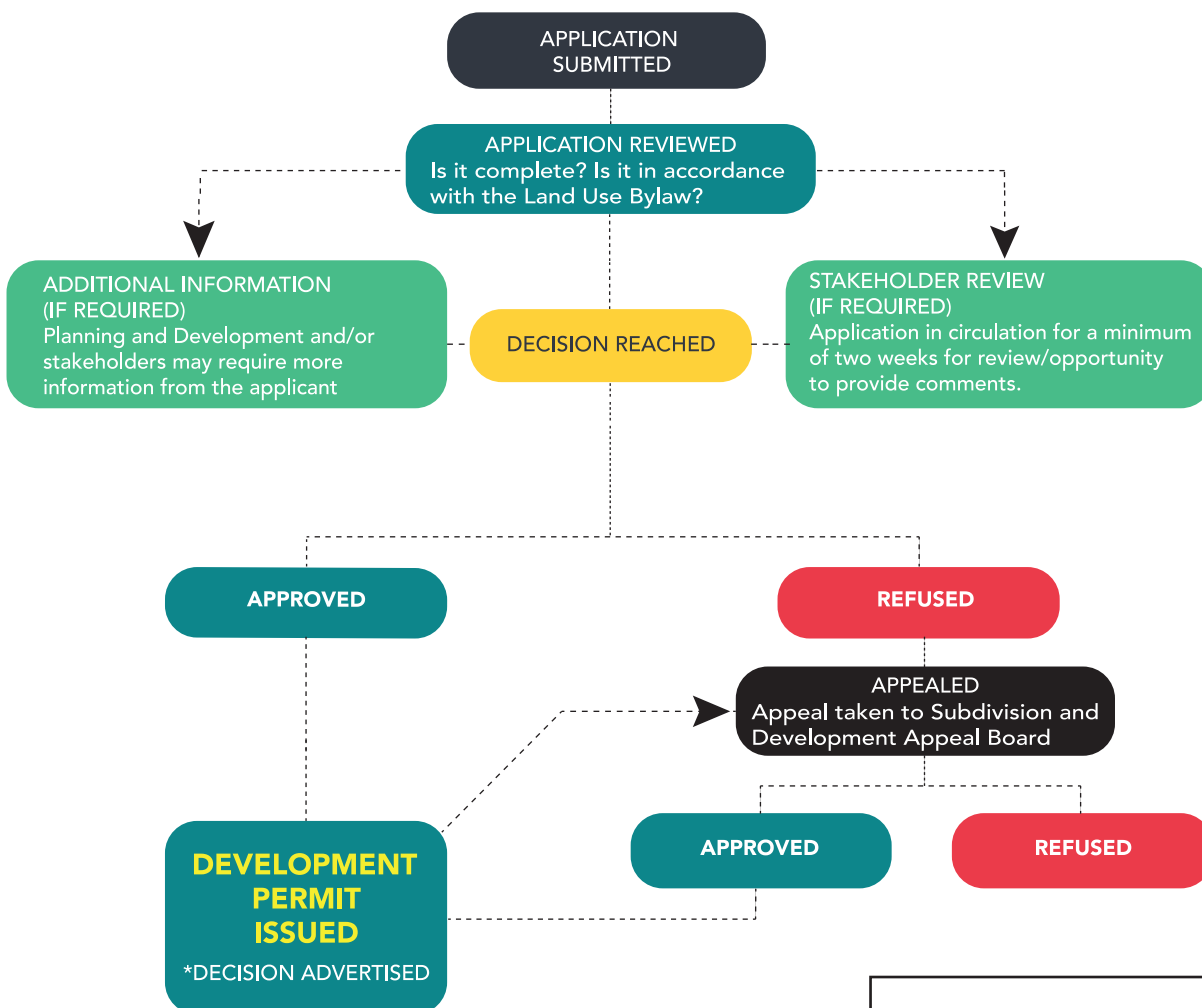

rmwb.ca/planning

Before construction can begin in the RMWB, development approval must be granted under the Municipality's Land Use Bylaw. This approval comes in the form of a development permit and is issued by the Planning and Development department.

Examples of work that require a development permit include constructing a deck, starting a home business, installing a sign and building or relocating a home.

In some cases, before a development permit can be approved, the application must first be circulated to internal and external stakeholders to review the project or request additional information.
