Conklin Water Treatment Plant Update

August 15, 2024

Crews are working on upgrades to the Conklin Water Treatment Plant. The treated water being provided to Conklin continues to meet all the Canadian Drinking Water Guidelines and this work will not affect water service in the community.

Water being hauled from Anzac

In order to complete the upgrades, water will be temporarily hauled from the Anzac water distribution system to the Conklin Water Treatment Plant to maintain regular service in the community. This change in water source will be tested next week and is expected to be implemented for approximately four weeks, beginning in September.

Continuous monitoring and regular testing

Water quality at the Conklin Water Treatment Plant and in the distribution system is very closely monitored and tested. Tap water will continue to be safe to drink, but there may be minor aesthetic changes, which is normal when there is a change in water source. Additional sampling and testing will be done on the water coming from Anzac to ensure the high quality is maintained and the treated water being provided to Conklin continues to meet all the Canadian Drinking Water Guidelines.
